A Set Table and Clean Clothing

Simon 262

Seif 1 סעיף א

BASIS OF THIS SEIF Kavod Shabbos

– A lit lamp, a set table and a made-up bed are all for the honor of Shabbos (Rambam 30:5; MB 3) – the two angels who accompany a person from shul (Shabbos 119b; MB 3).

– Throwing things off the table is avoided where one does not sweep afterwards with something permitted, so that the house is not left unkempt (MA 1; MB 3; see 337).

– The lower tablecloth keeps the table from being uncovered when the upper one is shaken out (MB 4); the Maharshal's further concern of ohel – the Magen Avraham notes from 315:11 that this is not an ohel (MA 1).

Melacha: None named – the seif concerns honoring Shabbos, not a prohibition.

Background (general; not stated in the seif): Sweeping on Shabbos is restricted in 337:2, where filling in holes in the floor is the concern – compare בונה #34; an ohel is likewise discussed under building (315) – compare בונה #34.

Coming Home to a Prepared House

HALACHA 262:1

The siman's heading states its subject: sanctifying Shabbos with a set table and with clean clothing. The Rambam (Hilchos Shabbos 30:5) lists a lit lamp, a table set for eating and a bed made up, and says that all of these are for the honor of Shabbos. The table 1) is prepared from Erev Shabbos, for Friday night (MB 1).

The Biur Halacha (ד"ה יסדר שלחנו) adds that in the room where he eats he certainly must cover all the tables there, and perhaps it is fitting to do so in the other rooms as well (Eliya Rabba, Pri Megadim). The Pri Megadim (MZ 1) records the Eliya Rabba's inclination to cover the tables of every room, "and so it is fitting to do"; but in the room where he eats, covering every table is required.

Which Beds

The beds 2) are those they sit on (MA 1; MB 2). The Pri Megadim (EA 1) notes that the Perisha says the same, as does the Rambam's "a bed made up" (30:5); the Bach, however, speaks of two beds – one for sitting and one for sleeping. The Mishna Berura's conclusion: it is good that the bed he sleeps on also be made up (MB 2).

The Two Angels

Why the house must be found "set" 3): this is the honor of Shabbos. The Mishna Berura cites the teaching (Shabbos 119b, Rabbi Yosi bar Yehuda) that two ministering angels accompany a person from the shul to his house on Erev Shabbos, one good and one bad. If he finds a lamp lit, a table set and a bed made up, the good angel blesses him that it be so next Shabbos, and the bad angel is forced to answer "Amen"; if not, it is the reverse (MB 3). The Pri Megadim (MZ 1) notes that the Eliya Rabba offers a further explanation of the "two" in terms of the planets (Tzedek at the end of Erev Shabbos, Ma'adim at its beginning) and of two forces, and the Pri Megadim rejects it: "we have no [reason] to depart from its plain meaning: two actual angels."

The Mishna Berura adds that it is good to clear spider webs from the house while it is still day, to clean it in honor of Shabbos (MB 3; MA 1). The Magen Avraham records the Arizal's practices: eating at a four-legged table like the table of the Mikdash, a blessing over two bundles of hadassim at each of the three Kiddushes, and leaving the cup of Birkas HaMazon on the table on Friday night with a little wine and crumbs, but not a whole loaf (MA 1).

Throwing Food on the Floor

The Darchei Moshe, cited by the Magen Avraham (1), brings the Mahari Weil's ruling that one may throw something off the table without concern for "those who say that one throws out the angel." The Darchei Moshe suggests that their words are a parable: if he throws something down and cannot sweep the house on Shabbos, the house will be unkempt, and the good angel that accompanies him will leave – "and the matter is correct." He adds that he has not seen people concerned about this, since they sweep afterwards with something permitted (337). The Magen Avraham concludes: therefore, where it is not the custom to sweep on Friday night, it is forbidden to throw (MA 1; Maharil, responsum 163). The Mishna Berura codifies it as a matter of good practice: at the night meal one should be careful not to throw anything off the table if he does not sweep afterwards with something permitted, so as not to make the house unkempt – and likewise at the morning meal (MB 3).

The Table All Shabbos

The Rama adds that the table should remain set all 4) of Shabbos – the Mishna Berura reads it until after Havdala. Some are accustomed to keep two cloths on the table besides the upper one over the bread, because when the cloth is shaken out the table would otherwise be uncovered (MB 4). The Magen Avraham (1) gives the Maharshal's practice with a second reason as well: a cloth that hangs a tefach below the table makes an ohel when it is spread, so the lower cloth was left in place permanently. The Magen Avraham himself notes that, as written in 315:11, this is not an ohel – and the Mishna Berura records only the first reason.

SHULCHAN ARUCH & MEFORSHIM

לקדש השבת בשלחן ערוך ובכסות נקיה. ובו ג סעיפים

1 He should arrange his table 1), make up the beds 2), and put all the matters of the house in order, so that he will find it set 3) and arranged when he comes from the shul.

RAMA And his table should be set all 4) of the Shabbos day, and so is the custom, and one should not change it (Tur, end of siman 289; Mordechai, perek Kol Kisvei; and Hagahos Maimoniyos, perek 29 of Shabbos).

COMMENTARIES, IN ORDER OF THE TEXT

He should arrange his table שלחנו ויציע המטות ויתקן כל ענייני הבית

MAGEN AVRAHAM 1 מגן אברהם (א)

יפנה קורי עכביש מהבית (ר"ח ע"ה), האר"י הקפיד מאד לאכול על השלחן של ד' רגלים דוגמת שלחן המקדש ולברך על ב' אגודות הדס בכל ג' קידושים ובליל שבת הניח על השלחן הכוס של ב"ה עם מעט יין וקצת פתיתין אבל לא לחם שלם ועבי"ד ססי' קע"ח ועסי' ק"פ:

> He should arrange his table. He should clear spider webs from the house (ר"ח ע"ה). The Arizal was very particular to eat at a table with four legs, like the table of the Mikdash, and to recite a blessing over two bundles of hadassim at all three Kiddushes. And on Friday night he left on the table the cup of Birkas HaMazon with a little wine and some crumbs, but not a whole loaf. And see Yoreh De'ah, end of siman 178; and see siman 180 [here in Orach Chaim, seif 2].

ויציע המטות. שיושבין עליהם, ז"ל ד"מ כ' מהרי"ו בפסקיו מותר לזרוק דבר חוץ לשלחן ואין לחוש לאותן שאומרים שזורקין המלאך ע"כ ואפשר שדבריהם דברי משל שאם יזרוק דבר ולא יוכל לכבד הבית בשבת א"כ יהיה מנוול ויצא המלאך הטוב המלוה והדבר נכון

אבל לא ראיתי חוששים לזה ומכבדין אחר כך הבית בדבר המותר כמ"ש סי' של"ז עכ"ל, וא"כ במקום שלא נהגו לכבד בליל שבת אסור לזרוק ע' בתשו' מהרי"ל סי' קס"ג:

> And make up the beds – that they sit on. The Darchei Moshe wrote as follows: "The Mahari Weil wrote in his Piskei that it is permitted to throw something off the table, and there is no need to be concerned for those who say that one throws out the angel. End quote. And it is possible that their words are a parable: if he throws something and cannot sweep the house on Shabbos, then it will be unkempt, and the good angel that accompanies [him] will leave – and the matter is correct. But I have not seen people concerned about this, and they sweep the house afterwards with something permitted, as written in siman 337." End of his words. If so, in a place where they are not accustomed to sweep on Friday night, it is forbidden to throw; see the responsa of the Maharil, siman 163.

רש"ל היה לו ב' מפות על השלחן מלבד העליונה משום דכשמנערין המפה נמצא השלחן מגולה ועוד דהמפה תלויה מעל השלחן טפח וכשפורס' עושה אוהל ולכן הניח התחתונה תמיד ואחרת עליה (מט"מ) וכמ"ש סימן שט"ו סי"א דזה לא הוי אהל:

> The Maharshal had two cloths on the table besides the upper one, because when the cloth is shaken out the table is found uncovered; and further, because the cloth hangs down a tefach from the table, and when one spreads it, it makes an ohel. Therefore he always left the lower one, and [spread] another on top of it (מט"מ); and as written in siman 315:11, this is not an ohel.

PRI MEGADIM (ESHEL AVRAHAM) 1 on Magen Avraham 1 פרי מגדים – אשל אברהם (א)

> Set etc. – for this is the honor of Shabbos. Chazal said: Two ministering angels accompany a person on Erev Shabbos from the shul to his house, one good and one bad. When he comes to his house and finds a lamp lit, a table set and a bed made up, the good angel says, "May it be [Hashem's] will that it be so next Shabbos," and the bad angel answers "Amen" against his will. And if not, it is the reverse, heaven forbid. It is good to clear spider webs from the house while it is still day, to clean the house in honor of Shabbos.

וטוב ליזהר בסעודת הלילה שלא לזרוק דבר בבית חוץ לשלחן אם אין דרכו לכבד את הבית בדבר המותר [עסי' של"ז] אחר סעודה זו כדי שלא ינוול את הבית וכן בסעודת שחרית אם אינו מכבדו אח"כ:

Seif 2 סעיף ב

BASIS OF THIS SEIF Kavod Shabbos

- "And you shall honor it" – Shabbos clothing should not be like weekday clothing (Shabbos 113a; MB 5; Rambam 30:3).
- Letting the garments down does not look like arrogance, since he does not do so every day (Shabbos 113a); on weekdays they are tucked up against the mud (Taz 1).
- The clothing is for the honor of Shabbos, not of onlookers, so one wears it even alone (MB 6). White clothing is not worn in public where it looks like arrogance (Biur Halacha; EA 2).

Melacha: None named.

Shabbos Clothing

HALACHA 262:2

The source is the verse "and you shall honor it", which Chazal expound: your Shabbos clothing should not be like your weekday clothing (Shabbos 113a; MB 5). The Gemara there continues: Rav Huna said, if he has a change of clothes he should change; if not, he should let his garments down. Rav Safra objected that this looks like arrogance, and the Gemara answers that since he does not do so every day and does so now, it does not look like arrogance. The Rambam (30:3) likewise counts clean clothing as part of the honor of Shabbos, and writes that one who has nothing to change into lets his garment down.

The Mishna Berura adds that it is good not to wear on Shabbos anything he wore on a weekday, even a shirt; and, if he can, to have a separate tallis for Shabbos (MB 5; MA 2). The Magen Avraham's version of the first point, from the Kesavim of the Arizal, runs the other way: that he not wear on a weekday anything he wore on Shabbos (MA 2).

"Fine" 6) means according to his ability. Even traveling alone, or staying in a non-Jew's house, he should wear Shabbos clothes, because the clothing is for the honor of Shabbos and not for the honor of the onlookers (MB 6, Chayei Adam). The Mishna Berura also brings the Sefer Chassidim: one should not take a child onto his lap on Shabbos without first putting a cushion there, so that his clothes are not soiled (MB 6).

Letting the Garments Down

The printed gloss explains, from Rashi, that he lowers his garments so that they are long, like those of the wealthy "who sit in their homes" 7) – that is, who do not need to lift their garments off the ground for work (MB 7). The Taz (1) explains the practical point: on a weekday a person tucks his garments up into his belt so that they will not get dirty from the mud of the streets; on Shabbos he lets them hang down. The Pri Megadim (MZ 1) notes that the Bais Yosef identifies this as the Kol Bo's explanation, and that it is implied to be Rashi's as well.

White Garments

The Biur Halacha (ד"ה בגדים נאים), from the Pri Megadim (EA 2), adds a limit: wearing white clothing on Shabbos, if it looks like arrogance, should not be done. The Eliya Rabba brings a proof from the Gemara that the Rabbis wore black cloaks on Shabbos (Shabbos 147a, with Rashi ד"ה קמחלל שבתא as quoted by the Pri Megadim, EA 2). At home, however, a person may do as he wishes – not in public.

How Long

The Magen Avraham (2) brings the Agudah that one goes in Shabbos clothes until Motzaei Shabbos, after Havdala; he notes that 302:3 implies one may take them off on Shabbos, and answers that it speaks of one who has a special undergarment for Shabbos. He adds, from the Kavanos, that even a mourner changes his clothes for Shabbos.

SHULCHAN ARUCH & MEFORSHIM

Seif 3 סעיף ג

BASIS OF THIS SEIF Kavod Shabbos | Kabbalas Shabbos | Avoiding chilul Shabbos

- Greeting Shabbos as a king and as a bride (the seif; Shabbos 119a); as one goes out to greet the king (Rambam 30:2).
- Dressing right after washing is the honor of Shabbos, so one washes close to evening (Rama). Washing and dressing must not lead to a doubt of Shabbos desecration: women should come early; a late woman should rather light in weekday clothes; and it is better to sit in the dark than to desecrate Shabbos (MB 11). One going to the bathhouse should go early (MB 12).

Melacha: None named in the seif. MB 11 speaks of lighting the Shabbos candles late; for that melacha see 261:1 (Mav'ir, מבעיר #37).

[1] The Shulchan Aruch explains: "he should let them down toward the bottom, so that they are long, like the measure of the wealthy who sit in their homes 7) (Rashi there)."

Greeting Shabbos

HALACHA 262:3

The seif quotes the Gemara (Shabbos 119a). The Rambam (30:2) describes the same: one sits with dignity, awaiting the welcome of Shabbos as one goes out to greet the king, and the early Sages would gather their students on Erev Shabbos, wrap themselves, and say, "Come, let us go out to greet Shabbos the King." Once dressed 8), he stays in his Shabbos clothes until Motzaei Shabbos, after Havdala (MB 8).

On rejoicing 9): whoever does much to honor Shabbos – with his body, his clothes, or his eating and drinking – is praiseworthy (MB 9; see 242). The Zohar and the mekubalim warned strongly that there be no quarrel on Shabbos, especially between husband and wife, and the Mishna Berura points to Gittin 52a (MB 9, Tosefes Shabbos): a couple whom the Satan incited used to quarrel every twilight [of Erev Shabbos], until Rabbi Meir held them back three twilights and made peace between them.

The Customs of Kabbalas Shabbos

"As one who goes out" 10): the Magen Avraham (3) writes that it is good to go out to the field, and that in some places they go out from the shul to the courtyard and say "Come, let us go out." The Mishna Berura records our own custom: to turn to the west when saying "Bo'i v'shalom," to stand then, and to act it out as one who greets a great person (MB 10; EA 3). On Yom Kippur that falls on Shabbos they did not welcome Shabbos in this way, but only said "Mizmor Shir L'yom HaShabbos" before Barchu – even those who on other Yamim Tovim that fall on Shabbos add some psalms for Shabbos (MB 10).

Washing and Dressing

The Rama ties the dressing to the washing: dress immediately after 11) washing, and therefore wash only close to evening. The Mishna Berura adds that women too are accustomed to wash and dress in Shabbos clothes before lighting the candles, "and fortunate are they." But on the short days, when they stay late in the store and only afterwards wash and dress, they come to a doubt of Shabbos desecration – so they should be warned to come early. If she is late, it is a greater mitzva to light in weekday clothes than to risk Shabbos desecration; and if the husband sees that she is late, it is a great mitzva that he light the candles himself and pay no attention to her complaint – and a still greater mitzva to sit in the dark than to desecrate Shabbos (MB 11, Chayei Adam).

"Close to evening" 12) refers to washing a little at home, as the Gemara relates of Rabbi Yehuda bar Ilai, who on Erev Shabbos was brought a tub of hot water and washed his face, hands and feet (Shabbos 25b). One who goes to the bathhouse should certainly go early, so that he not come to desecrate Shabbos – especially in winter, when the days are short (MB 12; see 260, MB 1).

3 He should put on 8) his fine clothes and rejoice at the arrival of Shabbos 9), as one who goes out to greet 10) the king, and as one who goes out to greet a groom and bride. For Rabbi Chanina would wrap himself and stand at sunset on Erev Shabbos and say, "Come, let us go out to greet Shabbos the Queen"; Rabbi Yannai said, "Come, O bride; come, O bride."

RAMA And he should dress himself in Shabbos clothes immediately after 11) he has washed himself, and this is the honor of Shabbos. Therefore he should not wash for Shabbos except close to evening 12), so that he dresses himself immediately* (Hagahos Mordechai HaChadashim).

MAGEN AVRAHAM 3 מגן אברהם (ג)

כיוצא לקראת. וטוב לצאת לשדה ובקצת מקומות נוהגין לצאת מבית הכנסת לחצר ואומרים באו ונצא וכו' (כ"ה):

> As one who goes out to greet. And it is good to go out to the field. In some places they are accustomed to go out from the shul to the courtyard and say "Come, let us go out" etc. (כ"ה).

PRI MEGADIM (ESHEL AVRAHAM) 3 on Magen Avraham 3 פרי מגדים – אשל אברהם (ג)

כיוצא עמ"א ואנו נוהגין שמהפכין פניהם לצד מערב כשאומרים בואי בשלום:

> As one who goes out – see the Magen Avraham. And we are accustomed to turn our faces to the west when saying "Bo'i v'shalom."

MISHNA BERURA ON THIS SEIF

MISHNA BERURA 8 משנה ברורה (ח)

ילבש וכו' – וילך בהם עד מו"ש אחר הבדלה:

> He should put on etc. – and he should go in them until Motzaei Shabbos, after Havdala.

MISHNA BERURA 9 משנה ברורה (ט)

וישמח בביאת שבת – וכל המרבה לכבדו הן בגופו הן בבגדיו הן באכילה ושתיה הרי זה משובח ועיין בסימן רמ"ב. בזהר ומקובלים הזהירו מאד שלא יהיה שום מחלוקת בשבת חו"ש ובפרט בין איש לאשתו וכן מוכח בגיטין [דף נ"ב ע"א] גבי הנהו בי תרי דהוו מינצו בהדי הדדי עי"ש [תו"ש]:

> And rejoice at the arrival of Shabbos – And whoever does much to honor it, whether with his body, with his clothes, or with eating and drinking, is praiseworthy; and see siman 242. The Zohar and the mekubalim warned greatly that there be no quarrel at all on Shabbos, heaven forbid, and especially between husband and wife; and so it is evident in Gittin [52a] regarding that couple who would quarrel with each other; see there [Tosefes Shabbos].

MISHNA BERURA 10 משנה ברורה (י)

כיוצא וכו' – בקצת מקומות נוהגין לצאת מבהכ"נ לעזרה ואומרים בואו ונצא וכו' [כנה"ג] ואנו נוהגין שמהפכין פניהם לצד מערב כשאומרים בואי בשלום וכו' ונוהגין לעמוד אז ולעשות דוגמא כמו שמקבל פני אדם גדול נהגו שלא לקבל את השבת ביוה"כ שחל בשבת רק שאומרים מזמור שיר ליום השבת קודם ברכו ואפילו הנוהגין בשאר יו"ט כשחל בשבת לומר עוד איזה מזמורים בשביל שבת:

> As one who goes out etc. – In some places they are accustomed to go out from the shul to the courtyard and say "Come, let us go out" etc. [Kenesses HaGedolah]. And we are accustomed to turn our faces to the west when saying "Bo'i v'shalom" etc., and we are accustomed to stand then, and to act it out as one who greets a great person. They were accustomed not to welcome Shabbos [in this way] on Yom Kippur that falls on Shabbos, but only to say "Mizmor Shir L'yom HaShabbos" before Barchu – even those who are accustomed, on other Yamim Tovim that fall on Shabbos, to say some further psalms for the sake of Shabbos.

MISHNA BERURA 11 משנה ברורה (יא)

מיד אחר וכו' – וגם הנשים נוהגות קודם הדלקת הנרות לרחוץ את עצמן וללבוש בגדי שבת ואשרי להם אמנם בימים הקצרים שמתאחרים לישב בחנות ואח"כ רוחצות ולובשות ובין כך יבואו חו"ש לספק חילול שבת לכן טוב להזהיר להם שיקדימו לבוא לרחוץ וללבוש וכשמתאחרת מצוה יותר שתדליק כך במלבושי חול מלבוא חו"ש לספק חילול שבת ואם הבעל רואה שמתאחרת מצוה גדולה שהוא ידליק הנרות ולא ישגיח בקטטת אשתו ומצוה גדולה יותר לישב בחשך מלחלל שבת חו"ש [ח"א]:

Immediately after etc. – The women too are accustomed, before lighting the candles, to wash themselves and put on Shabbos clothes, and fortunate are they. However, on the short days they stay late sitting in the store and afterwards wash and dress, and meanwhile they come, heaven forbid, to a doubt of Shabbos desecration. Therefore it is good to warn them to come early to wash and dress. And when she is late, it is a greater mitzva that she light as she is, in weekday clothes, than to come, heaven forbid, to a doubt of Shabbos desecration. And if the husband sees that she is late, it is a great mitzva that he light the candles himself and pay no attention to his wife's complaint; and it is a still greater mitzva to sit in the dark than to desecrate Shabbos, heaven forbid [Chayei Adam].

MISHNA BERURA 12 משנה ברורה (יב)

סמוך לערב – היינו כשהוא רוחץ עצמו מעט בביתו וכמו שמובא בגמרא [שבת כ"ה ע"ב] לענין ר' יהודא בר' אלעאי ע"ש אבל כשהוא הולך לבית המרחץ בודאי מהנכון להקדים עצמו כדי שלא יבוא לחילול שבת ובפרט בימי החורף כשהימים קצרים ועיין לעיל בסימן ר"ס סק"א במ"ב מה שכתבנו שם:

Close to evening – that is, when he washes himself a little at home, as brought in the Gemara [Shabbos 25b] regarding Rabbi Yehuda bar Ilai; see there. But when he goes to the bathhouse, it is certainly proper to go early, so that he not come to desecrate Shabbos – especially in winter, when the days are short. And see above, siman 260, s"k 1 of the Mishna Berura, what we wrote there.
